Brief Description of Module Content

The power and influence of business in society is greater than ever, and the demands placed on business to be ethical by its various stakeholders are becoming more complex and challenging. This module looks at the fundamentals of business ethical decision making and the pressures to compromise the ethical standards of individuals and their organisations and the safeguards against malpractice, with heavy emphasis on real life case studies.

Aims

This module aims to:

- Introduce students to the impact of business ethics within corporations including decision-making, governance, and corporate social responsibility within a global economy.
- Introduce students to corporate governance, focusing on the understanding of UK Corporate Governance Code 2018, including the aspects of role of board, leadership, effectiveness, accountability, remuneration, relations with shareholders, executive compensation and information disclosure.

Details of Teaching and Learning Activities

The module will use a series of workshops. Students will be expected to research texts and on-line resources prior to each session to prepare for group discussion of case studies from the core text and other real-life situations.

Formative Assessment

Formative assessment includes group case studies, assessed through a combination of in-class presentation, lecturer face-to-face feedback and peer feedback.
